Boid family Bible, University Libraries Division of Special Collections, The University of Alabama
Biographical/Historical note

Family Bibles are typically handed down through a family, with each following generation recording family events inside it. These events generally include births, deaths, marriages, baptisms, and confirmations. Such Bibles are often used for genealogical research.

Scope and Contents note

The collection contains a bound, well-worn copy of the Old Testament. There is a name inscribed in pencil inside the front cover but is, for the most part, illegible; the first name is possibly Herbert, while the last name is Boid. The birth dates of several other Boids are listed on the end papers, again in pencil and partially illegible.
