Preferred Citation note

Flag of the Union 1984 article about the University Club, Tuscaloosa, Alabama, University Libraries Division of Special Collections, The University of Alabama
Biographical/Historical note

The building in Tuscaloosa, Alabama, known as the University Club was built in 1834 by James Dearing. It was purchased by Alabama governor Arthur P. Bagby who lived in the house from 1837 to 1841, when Tuscaloosa was the state capitol. At that time is was known as the Governor's Mansion. The building then passed through several families until World War II when it became the Tuscaloosa Service Center where thousands of servicemen were entertained during the war. In 1944, the University of Alabama acquired the building, which reopened after repairs and redecorating in 1946 as the University Club, a private dining club for faculty and staff.

Scope and Contents note

The collection contains a framed copy of the 1984 "Flag of the Union" article about the 150th anniversary of the University Club. The article describes when the building was built and purchased by the University of Alabama, as well as information on renovations.
